

ASAKUSA BASHI

浅草橋

ASAKUSABASHI is an area in Tokyo well known for its doll stores. A number of wholesale and retail doll shops line a street called EDO DORI(street).

The most common type of dolls is the HINA-NINGYO, representing imperial court figures, which are displayed during the Girl's Festival in March. GOGATSU-NINGYO are dolls dressed in samurai costumes, for the Boy's Festival in May. Other dolls representing figures from various periods of Japanese history are also very popular. Another popular type is called Kokeshi, which is a painted wooden spindle-like doll that comes in various sizes. There are many other shops in this area that also sells toys, Japanese paper (washi), wrapping paper, gift bags, ribbon, stickers, paper decorations and other things that could be used in handicrafts. This area is located on the opposite side of the Sumo tournaments hall (Ryogoku Kokugikan) next to the Sumida River. You may be able to see Sumo wrestlers, as there are several Sumo stables in this area. Most of the shops are closed on Sunday and Japanese holidays.
